What Boes Lee Mean?

Some weeks ago, it was apparent that the rebel leaders were debating the policy of evacuating Richmond, This did not appear strange, inasmuch as Gen. Grant was, slowly but securely, extending his lines around the city, and cutting off Lee's sources of supply. It was believed that he was a soldier of too much sagacity to remain and be Hampton expects them to do. cooped up, and forced to give battle under disadvantageous circumstances, or be starved into a surrender. At the present moment, however, it would seem that if he ever contemplated abandoning the city he has, from causes what is his policy? Does he expect to be able to overwhelm Sherman, and thus reestablish his communications with the chief sources of his supplies of subsistence? The recent desperate attempts of Bragg to destroy cur forces on the Neuse, would inthus reestablish his communications ire dictae something of the sort. But we take it for granted that he has calculated all the costs of a failure, and is prepared to meet them. What, then, is the inquiry, does a failure to vanquish Sherman involve? Nothing less than the remaining at Richmond, or an attempt to move North with a view to of Edgefield, Tenn., and will be held personally reconstrain Grant to follow him; for it is Post too late now to adopt the other alternative of falling back via Lynchburg through East Tennessee into Georgia With all of his forces concentrated, a movement North might present rather Grant would be willing to donate him 10 HHLS. OF THE FINE CABRAGE AT rations to try the experiment. He could not thus relieve his capita'. Grant's army is numerous enough to hold it, and follow Lee North also. Lee must, therefore, in the contingency supposed, stay at Richmond. Yet, he could not expect to win a victory there, because he would be under the necessity of delivering battle on ground chosen by his opponent. Regarding the situation from this stand point, it may be asked what could have been Lee's motive in permitting himself to be forced into the alternatives presented him? Is there any way to throw light upon this question? Mr. Foote, the rebel Congressman, stated in New York, that the leaders had, before he left, despaired of success, and admitted that their cause was lost. Gen. Lee has declared that without the aid of negroes as soldiers, the war could not long be maintained. Upon political matters he has been reticent. He is the favorite of the Southern army and people; and it has been proposed more than once to supplant Jeff. Davis with him. He is not conmitted deeply, like Davis, against peace and reunion, having at the outset declared the war entirely without cause. Believing that the white population of the insurrectionary States cannot supply the demand for reinforcements, and cut off from the States from whence negroes drawn supposing they could be made efficient if he had them-may it not be his desire to keep himself in a position to be made the instrument of negotiating a peace, and restoring the Union?

Upon any other hypothesis, his remaining at Richmond, with every safe outlet closing against him, would be exhibiting only the recklessness of the garnester, who hazards his all upon a single throw of dice. He has been re, garded as a wise and safe leader. Now is his time to prove the claim beyond

Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, the rebel cavalry commander, is a great scamp. He inherits his rascality and brutality. It is related of his father that he once entertained a crowd of his brother slaveholders with an argument proving that it was true economy to work a negro to death in the course of ten years, and supply his place with a fresh one. If this brute were alive now, he would glory in his son, who in a letter to General Sherman said:

It is part of the system of the thieves whom you designate as your foragers to fire the dwellings of those citizens whom they have robbed. To check this inhuman system, which is justly execrated by every civilized nation, I have directed my men to shoot down destrable streets in the city Apply to W. MATT BROWN & Co.,
41 Cherry street all of your men who are caught burn-ing. This order shall remain in force, as long as you diagrace the profession of the army by allowing your men to destroy private dwellings.

The charge of robbery and arson thus made against Sherman's men is false. It is invented by Hampton to palliate murders committed by his band of marauders and robbers. Sherman's policy has been the same in South Carolina that it was in Georgia In the recent message of Gov. Brown to the Georgia Legislature, he makes MRS A. H.
